

PWCS programs, administration, staff, and students are often cited as positive models by regional, state, and national organizations. Three years in a row, Prince William County ranked among the Nation's 100 Best Communities for Young People by America's Promise Alliance and ING. "The Washington Post" High School Challenge ranks PWCS high schools among the top 9% in the nation.

PWCS is often asked by education officials to share its innovative programs. PWCS led state efforts to develop the Standards of Learning (SOL) for science and was the first school division in Virginia to restructure its curriculum. It also was the first to develop its own performance tests. As a result, the state followed the PWCS model for the SOL testing program.

Are you looking for a new opportunity to have a positive impact as a leader?

Prince William County Public Schools \(PWCS\) is actively seeking a dynamic leader to support the strategic work of the Division as an Associate Superintendent for Teaching & Learning.

This position leads the implementation of a PreK12 instructional program with innovative curriculum, student learning supports and services, professional learning services, student opportunity and multilingual services, site principals for the Governors School at Innovation Park, Independence Nontraditional School, Juvenile Detention Center, and K-8 Virtual Academy. The Associate Superintendent for Teaching and Learning ensures the division's educational objectives are aligned to state standards and instructional frameworks and guides yield instructional excellence and high student achievement outcomes in all subject areas.

Salary: $194, 038 - $268, 594
Competitive benefits

Learn more about this great opportunity using the link below:

PWCS Associate Superintendent for Teaching & Learning